

CERRILLOS.

From Advertiser:

Cerrillos, N. M., is destined to become one of the large towns of the Territory. As a site for the establishment of manufactures of different kinds it presents many advantages which are sure soon to attract capital and enterprise.

The excellence of Cerrillos coal is generally known throughout the Southwest. It consists of anthracite and bituminous in unlimited quantities—enough to supply the entire southwest for all time. Coal is not the only natural resource which will contribute to the progress and prosperity of Cerrillos and surrounding country, but there are gold, silver, copper, lead, zinc, iron and fire-clay in a more or less undeveloped state, but easily available and promising rich rewards to intelligently directed industry.

As a point for the establishment of a smelter there are few places in the Rocky Mountain region that present advantages superior to Cerrillos, and such an institution is greatly needed to treat the ores now being shipped from this place to Denver and elsewhere at great expense.

Cerrillos makes a bid for more people, more capital and enterprise, and for these offers most excellent inducements.

An Informal Confab.

That story which is being told of Congressman-elect Steward, of Illinois, to the effect that every year he takes all the children of his village (Plano) to the circus which comes nearest to that village, is a true one, but there are others equally as true that show the character of the man as well.

In 1880 or 1882 the Greenbackers of Illinois nominated Steward for governor and the Democrats thought it would be a good idea to endorse the nomination. Accordingly the chairman of the state central committee took a turn down to Plano to see the eccentric Levi A. the house the chairman was told he would find Steward at the grove. This grove is embraced in a considerable estate owned by Steward and is kept exclusively for picnic parties and camp meetings, the owner incurring no charge for the use of the beautiful grounds. When the chairman reached a small stream which runs through the grove he saw Steward on the other side, chopping down a dead tree. He called to Steward and told him who he was.

"Come over," said Steward.

"How'll I get across?" asked the chairman.

"Can't you swim?"

"No."

"Well, I can; wait a minute."

In about that time Steward stripped and plunged into the stream with nothing but an old straw hat on for clothing. And for an hour he, in that style of dress, sat on a log with the chairman of the state central committee and planned the campaign.

It is also related of him that after he was nominated for congress last fall the chairman of the congressional district committee came to him to get some money for campaign purposes.

"Not a dollar," said Steward. "I understand that if I take a seat in Congress I've got to swear that I have spent no money for my election, and I'm not going to Congress to swear to a lie."

The chairman explained that the money was wanted for legitimate expenses, such as printing tickets, etc.

"Hang the tickets," said Steward. "If my neighbors don't want me to go to Congress bad enough to write my name on their tickets, I don't want to go."

And not a red did the election cost him.
